

Managed Maid Eldercare

We recognise that for many families, a trusted maid may have served the family and built up strong relationships over time. We realise that many ageing families are not yet ready to have a home nurse, but they do need some skilled support. So we have introduced our managed maid service, which provides a training and supervision package to allow your maid to provide basic eldercare. Should the family medical needs increase over time, you can access our home nursing professionals.

Training and upskilling maids in place

We will come to your family home, carry out a detailed understanding of your situation and draw up a bespoke training plan for your maid. This plan will be designed and delivered by a qualified nurse based on family needs. Our visiting nurse will train, assess and supervise your maid over three months in the delivery of practical eldercare.

Additional support when you need it

After the initial training period an ongoing supervision and training program is put in place by our nurse. You are also able to access holiday cover for maid absences, specialist nursing procedures as required, as well as additional training packages on a client specific care basis.

Peace of mind and great value

The benefit of our Managed Maid Eldercare is it minimises disruption to the household, provides a well regarded maid with the additional skills to support the elderly, as well as peace of mind to sons or daughters far away. And by upskilling your existing staff to cope with changed circumstances, it provides a great value solution to eldercare in your own home.
